

Nothing is more important in war than unity in command.
—Napoleon

Unity of command is not alone sufficient. Unity of planning, unity of common item procurement, and unity of doctrine are equally necessary.
—General Henry H. ("Hap") Arnold

You will usually find that the enemy has three courses open to him and of these he will adopt the fourth.
—Moltke, The Elder

There are no "battlespace management" magic bullets that will substitute for the ability of on-scene Commanders, Soldiers, and Airmen to make appropriate decisions based on the ebb and flow of events.

—Richard P. Hallion, Jr.
