MEMORANDUM FOR Lt. Colonel Beverly C. Dunn:

Colonel Jordan is very anxious to include the remarks of the guests at the opening exercises this morning in the mimeographed report of the exercises. Unfortunately a stenographer was not present when these remarks were made, so if it is not too much trouble I would appreciate it very much if you will give me a memorandum covering the points which you desire to be included.

REMARKS MADE BY COLONEL BEVERLY C. DUNN AT THE OPENING EXERCISES OF THE ARMY INDUSTRIAL COLLEGE,
September 3, 1935.

Colonel Jordan, Distinguished Guests and Students of the Army Industrial College.

It is indeed a pleasure to be with you today upon the opening of your school course, and to be associated once more with the College which very broadmindedly, although somewhat reluctantly, agreed to list my name with the Alumni some seven or eight years past.

From the outline of studies to be followed this year, touched upon by Colonel Jordan in his talk this morning, I note with particular interest that the College course which was thought to have assumed a "permanent set" years ago has under able guidance gone forward by leaps and bounds. Personally, I regard the studies pursued at this College as being the most interesting work which has fallen to my lot while in the Service, and undoubtedly all of you will enjoy equally the discussions and assorted points of view to be presented on this floor during the coming year.

Having returned to Washington recently and assumed the role of Director of Procurement under The Assistant Secretary of War and his Executive Assistant, Colonel Earl McFarland, I am now endeavoring to become acquainted with my new job so that when occasion demands later in the fall our office will be in a position to defend the present set up against pressing student attack. Rest assured that we have no objection to being analyzed critically, and it will be a pleasure to confer with you individually and by committees later in the fall.

All kinds of good luck throughout the interesting year which awaits you.
