

NATIONAL DEFENSE UNIVERSITY
NEAR EAST SOUTH ASIA CENTER FOR STRATEGIC STUDIES
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20319-5066

COL (ret.) John H. (Jack) Gill, Professor

gilli@ndu.edu

John H. Gill (Jack) is a Professor on the faculty of the Near East – South Asia Center. A former U.S. Army South Asia Foreign Area Officer, he retired as a colonel in 2005 after more than 27 years of service. Prior to joining the NESAC Center, he worked on South Asia issues in the Pentagon from 1998-2001, including the 1999 Kargil crisis. During his time at the NESAC Center, he has also served as Special Assistant for India/Pakistan to the Plans and Policy Director of the U.S. Joint Staff and as Military Advisor to Ambassador James Dobbins, the U.S. envoy to the Afghan opposition forces (2001-02). From August 2003 to January 2004, he served in Islamabad as the liaison officer to the Pakistan Army for U.S. forces in Afghanistan including participation in Tripartite Commission meetings and other trilateral discussions.

He has been following South Asia issues from the intelligence and policy perspectives since the mid-1980's in positions with the U.S. Joint Staff, the U.S. Pacific Command staff, and the Defense Intelligence Agency. His publications on South Asia include an Atlas of the 1971 India-Pakistan War, chapters in Strategic Asia (2003 and 2005), and a chapter in US-Indian Strategic Cooperation into the 21st Century: More than Words (2006). Prof. Gill is currently working on chapters addressing the 1987 India-Pakistan crisis, US-India military relations, and military operations during the 1999 Kargil conflict. He is also an internationally recognized military historian and has authored several books and numerous papers on the Napoleonic era.

October 2007

“CONCORDIA PER COMMENTATIONEM”